Row 2 – Rock Dacquisto, Al West, Steve Lopeman, Rick Robbins, Mike Swietzer, Pat Plaster, Ed Nell, Dennis Brown, Coach Jim Parker

In his first year, Coach Jim Parker and his high-spirited gridders captured third place in a very tight race for the Olympic A League championship.

The record was marked by outstanding individual performances, with six Redskins capturing first team berths on the all-opponent team. A defense, which was considered the best in the league, was led by Pat Plaster, who topped the team in tackle points, earning him the title of Mr. Defense.

Quarterback Jim Green and halfback Al West were elected team co-captains.

2016 Senior Projects at PTHS ~ by Jan Boutilier

PTHS benefits from senior projects that are now required for graduation.

Team Effort in Field House Renovation

Football players, Lucas Foster, Jacob Ralls and Ezra Easley coordinated their efforts and talents in the renovation of the interior of the football/baseball field house on the PTHS campus.

Ralls tore out the old lockers and built 51 bigger and stronger lockers. The 51st locker is dedicated to the memory of Andy Palmer (a 2008 PTHS graduate – and 4-year football letter winner - who was killed in the line of duty while fighting a fire in northern California a month after his graduation) and holds Palmer’s football uniform. The Memorial Locker is lit up on each game day.

Foster painted the field house interior, including the floor, and included inspirational wording (Integrity, Character, Strength, Teamwork, etc.) on a border around the Redhawk that Easley artistically depicted in the center. It is tradition not to step on the Redhawk.

Mascots for the PTHS Campus

← Ellis Henderson wants to build sculptures for his career so based his senior project on what he learned in his welding classes, and created something that everyone would enjoy. His stainless steel Redhawk now graces the entrance to the PTHS Main Building.

Keegan Khile created a new → aluminum sign that is now in place between the gym and the tennis courts on the PTHS campus. He spent 78 hours on this project, not including the time spent with Chimacum artist Tom Jay and friends.

2016 Senior Projects at PTHS ~ by Jan Boutilier

Hydration Stations for the PT School District

Patrick Charlton was inspired to have fresh filtered drinking water for the school district, and through his leadership, hydration stations are now in place throughout the school district. The first one was installed on the second floor of the Main Building of PTHS in April of 2016.

It was hard to fill a water bottle with the old style drinking fountain as Patrick Charlton demonstrated. Jan Boutilier was the first one to make use of the new hydration station outside the Main Office at PTHS.

Senior Projects Benefit the Community

Veterans Appreciation Dinner

Aija Thomas raised $1,000 to organize and host an appreciation dinner, "Thank You, Veterans, From Me to You," for local veterans. She then raised an additional $3,500 at that event to donate to the Vet Connect program.

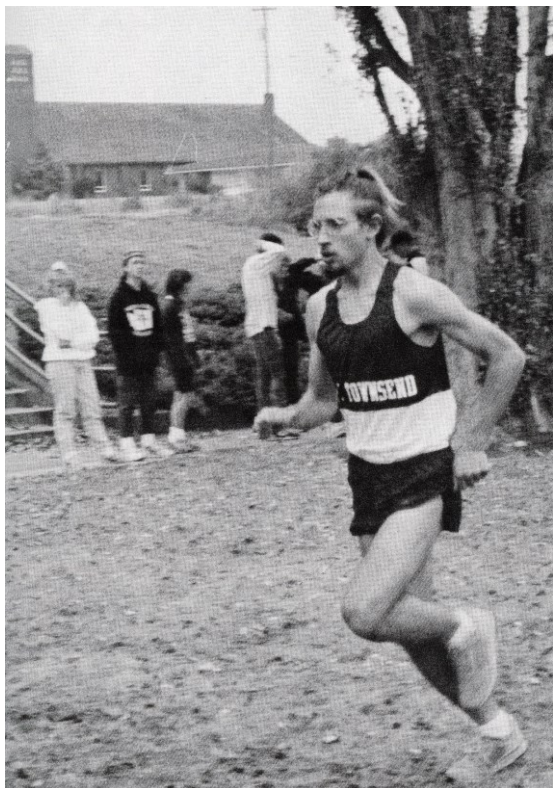

PTHS definitely has some amazing graduates! Some of the Class of 2016 featured have parents who also call PTHS their alma mater.

The PTHS senior project involves a career exploration or community service project. A supporting scholarly paper and 40 hours of project work are required.

All the 2017 senior projects will be presented at the Senior Symposium that will be held on Tuesday, May 23, 2017 at Fort Worden. The public is invited to attend. Contact Jan Boutilier for more information.

Cross Country 1991-92 – Ian Fraser, undefeated in Nisqually League competition, set a new course record at districts.

Senior Ian Fraser had an outstanding season going undefeated in Nisqually League competition. He set a new course record with a time of 15.47 while winning the race at districts. He went on to the state meet in Pasco, but stumbled and was unable to finish the race.

Coach Marcus Sather remarked, "I like coaching cross country because it's an individual sport but everyone's effort helps the team."

Editor's Note: Ian Fraser is the PTHS Track and Field head coach and the PTHS Cross Country assistant coach.
